L'objectif de ce sous-test consiste à repérer, parmi les quatre mots soulignés, celui provoquant une erreur dans l'énoncé proposé – ce qui revient en fait à comparer la phrase produite par le scripteur avec celle qu'il aurait dû produire pour exprimer ce qu'il voulait exprimer.

Chaque question présentera un court extrait tiré d'un livre, d'une revue, d'un magazine ou d'un journal. Ces extraits sont destinés à un public non spécialisé et portent sur des sujets d'actualité contemporaine.

By contrast, in musical theater an actor's dramatic performance is primary and the music plays a lesser role. Like Leonardo, he studied anatomy, but, unlike Leonardo, instead of studying human anatomy, he studied the anatomy of the horse. He dissected carcass after carcass, peeling away the five separate layers of muscles, baring the veins and arteries and nerves. For 18 long months he recorded his observations, and when he was* done, he could paint horses muscle by muscle, as they had never been painted before. Pretty decent work, for someone self-taught.”

The use of the phrase “pretty decent” conveys:

- B) tentative approval
- C) ironic understatement
- D) bitter envy

Question 3. *“When the maker of Megapower, a vitamin supplement, modified its formula two years ago, Tasmania, an island off the coast of New Zealand, suffered a decrease in its export earnings. Les étudiants entendront deux à trois monologues sur un sujet académique (par exemple un extrait de cours magistral prononcé en école de management). Après écoute, les candidats devront répondre à différentes questions cherchant à évaluer leurs capacités à saisir non seulement le sujet général et les faits présentés par l'orateur, mais également les détails qui les accompagnent.

Exemple :

Les candidats entendront :

- Narrator: Listen to part of a lecture in a economics class.

- Female Professor: From January 2017 until December 2018, 2,000 unemployed Finns got a monthly flat payment of €560. The aim was to see if a guaranteed safety net would help people find jobs and support them if they had to take insecure gig economy work.

When it launched the pilot scheme back in 2017, Finland became the first European country to test out the idea of an unconditional basic income. It was run by the Social Insurance Institution, a Finnish government agency, and involved 2,000 randomly selected people on unemployment benefits.

It immediately attracted international interest. With the likes of Mark Zuckerberg, Stephen Hawking, Elon Musk and Bernie Sanders all proponents of a universal basic income model, Finnish officials and participants have been inundated with media requests from around the globe. One participant who hoped to start his own business with the help of the unconditional monthly payment complained that, after speaking to 140 TV crews and reporters from as far afield as Japan and Korea, he has simply not been able to find the time.

But amid this unprecedented media attention, the experts who devised the scheme are concerned it is being misrepresented. A full-scale universal income trial would need to study different target groups, not just the unemployed. It would have to test different basic income levels, look at local factors. This is really about seeing how a basic unconditional income affects the employment of unemployed people.

Question 1. What is the main subject of this course?

- A) The monetary stimulus strategy in Finland
- B) An innovative project concerning the unemployed in Finland
- C) An Attempt by Google to influence Finnish government

- A) They are close to starting their professional life
- B) They all come from the same political party
- C) They have been selected on a voluntary basis
- D) They didn't have jobs when the scheme started

Question 3. What is cited as a negative result of all the media interest?

- A) Many criticisms have appeared in the press
- B) The names of the unemployed people have been leaked
- C) The portrayal of the scheme is inaccurate
- D) The outcome of the scheme is being altered

Partie 6. Interaction

Ce sous-test mesure la capacité d'un candidat à comprendre une interaction entre des locuteurs natifs, dans une discussion de groupe ou dans un débat, avec différents accents s'exprimant sur des sujets variés et complexes. Après écoute, les candidats devront répondre à différentes questions cherchant à évaluer leurs capacités à saisir non seulement le sujet général et les faits présentés dans la discussion, mais également les détails qui les accompagnent.

Exemple :

Advisor: Mr. Piestrak. How can I help you?

Student: Well, I'm thinking about transferring, but I'm, I'm not sure. I was hoping you could help me decide.

Advisor: I see. And would you keep the same major if you transferred? What is it, marketing?

Student: Yeah, I would. The credits I've earned here will transfer to McLean. I've already checked.

Advisor: May I ask why you chose to come to Sandborn University in the first place?

Student: Sure. The main reason is you have a great business school. And the second reason is that I wanted to get away from home.

Advisor: You're right Mr. Piestrak, we do have a great business school. But so does McLean. The thing is, you've got almost a year under your belt here now. At McLean, you'll be starting from scratch.

Student: Yeah, I know that. But I'm a little bit familiar with McLean, I had older friends who went there, and I visited it before I came here.
